

DO WITHOUT THEM LAND THIEVES WIN

Albany Able to Get Along With-out Saloon Licenses.

Judge Ross Grants Writs of Habeas Corpus.

BUSINESS IS PROSPERING

REMOVAL WOULD BE UNFAIR

Boundaries May Be Extended—Occupation Tax Has Been Suggested But Will Be Considered As Last Resort—Has No Regrets.

Cites Supreme Court As Saying That There Are Risks Attached to Taking Action From One State to Another.

ALBANY Ore., July 15.—Much speculation has been indulged in by a large class of citizens, as to how to meet the deficiency caused by the loss of the revenue heretofore accruing to the city from saloon licenses, this amount being an aggregate of $5000.

The predicted slump in business and realty values, on account of the city and county going dry, has failed to materialize. Everything is on a safe basis, realty transfers are increasing and a feeling of confidence seems to prevail in all lines of legitimate trade and endeavor.

All predictions to the contrary notwithstanding, the city will meet the need of sufficient revenue to conduct the city and provide for its maintenance. The advisability of extending the boundaries of the city's limits, so as to embrace a greater area of land and thus bringing in as taxable for city purposes large holdings of realty, is being investigated and no doubt will be submitted to a vote of the city. An occupation tax has been suggested, but this is looked upon as a last resort and hardly advisable.

Business men say that during the past six months trade has been the best of recent years, and shows a decided improvement. These conditions will continue, and with the prospects of one of the best crops ever harvested in the valley, Albany will have no regrets over the loss of the saloon revenue.

WHITHER GOES IT?

Seaside Spruce Lumber Company About to Move Plant.

The last number of the Seaside Signal thus deplores a fact of very real importance to that town:

"It is with deep regret that we learn of the possibility of the removal of the Seaside Spruce Lumber Company's plant from Seaside, but we are advised that the company has a flattering offer, from another town, now under consideration. This company, like all other corporations, is in business for the purpose of making money, and it is by no means to be supposed that it will remain in Seaside if it is sure of doing better elsewhere. The heaviest stockholders are not residents of Seaside, nor of Oregon, and there is no sentiment in the matter, nothing but business so far as they are concerned. We simply mention the matter as of vital interest to the people of this community, that they may take into consideration the facts as they are. That we are not telling a 'fish yarn,' the people may judge from the fact that the company is now offering its holdings of timber land for sale. Whether the sale of their lands will determine the matter or not, we are not advised; but a mill cannot run without timber."

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—For the first time since they were called into the federal courts on an indictment for alleged conspiracy to misappropriate public lands, found against them by a jury in Portland, Oregon, the eight accused business men of Los Angeles scored a point against the government yesterday. Circuit Judge Ross granted their applications for writs of habeas corpus and continued the cases until July 25.

At the opening of court the attorneys for the defense were not given an opportunity for further argument, for Judge Ross immediately read the following decision:

"The questions presented by the petitions in these cases have never been definitely and finally settled by the supreme court. That is apparent from the opinions of that court in the cases of Beavers against Henkel and Benson against Henkel, although it is, I think, quite evident from the opinions in those cases, and in others that might be cited, what the ultimate decision of those questions will be.

"But bearing in mind what was said by the supreme court in the case of Beavers against Henkel that 'we must never forget that in all controversies, civil and criminal, between the government and an individual, the latter is entitled to reasonable protection,' and that 'there are risks and burdens attending the removal of a person from one state for trial in another which ought not to be needlessly cast upon any individual,' I think the petitioners in these cases should be allowed an opportunity to present the questions here raised to the supreme court for final adjudication should they so desire.

"To that end a writ of habeas corpus in these cases will be granted, returnable forthwith except in that of the petitioner, Hynes, whose petition is defective in referring only to matters set out in the other cases and must be properly amended if he desires to secure a like writ."

Judge Ross stated to Attorney Warner, who represents Hynes, that he believed the defect in the petition to have been accidental. It was remedied an hour later and Hynes secured his liberty with the other defendants.

The bonds of the eight men, David M. Goodwin, A. M. Hedderly, Will D. Gould, Richard Hynes, Lee R. Myers, George L. Stearns, Warren Gillen and R. W. Kenney, were allowed to remain at the original figures.
